

whole concept of the management of diarrheal disease in developing countries (Pierce and Hirschhorn, 1977).

The present work is carried as a trial to evaluate oral rehydration therapy in moderate to severely dehydrated patients, through nasogastric perfusion, using W H O glucose-electrolyte solution. The key element of this study is to provide a cheap, simple, affordable and trustworthy oral rehydration solution.