

Banha University
Faculty of arts
Department of Sociology

Institutional development of civil society

" Case Study "

" Within obtain a doctoral degree in the Department of Sociology of Arts "

Preparation

Reda Abdel Rahman Hussein ALaraby

Supervision

Dr/ Azza Ahmed Siam

Professor and Head Department of Sociology
Faculty of Arts
Banha University

Dr/ Mohamed Naguib Ibrahim سلطان

Assistant Professor of Sociology
Faculty of Arts
Banha University

2014

summary of the study :

Introduction:

The primary objective of human development is to create an environment that enables individuals to enjoy a long , healthy and creative options in light of the strengthening of humanity, as well as the achievement of the opportunities that can be used to maximize the benefit from the level of humans.

Given the importance of civil society institutions , has seen significant development since the nineties of the last century , where the back of this sector as an active president in the development process at all levels , and expanding the role of mere organizations focused on the perspective typical to focus on the perspective of development , and work as intermediaries between government institutions and citizens in order to enhance their abilities and contribute to the shaping and directing public policy at all levels in order to achieve human development

Hence GOES most important objectives of the current study to Identify and analyze the mechanisms of action of civil society organizations - to focus on the Resalah branch Tookh Association as an institution of civil society - in human development , which is in the education, health and political participation . And in light of the global variables and external challenges in the framework programs of institutional change , which was in the direction of the government to increase decentralization and make government bureaucracy more flexible .

The present study attempts to answer the following questions :

- 1 - What is the nature of the mechanisms adopted by the institutions of civil society and enable them to achieve human development , and obstacles to achieve?
- 2 - What is the perception proposed to activate the roles and mechanisms of civil society institutions and the future in order to achieve human development in the light of the realities of the current situation and in Egyptian society , and the level of community study in particular?

- With regard to the curriculum :

- 1 - This study is based on a descriptive approach , where he was employed in the monitoring mechanisms of action of civil society organizations dealing with issues of human development.
- 2- As this study used the case study method Case study "" because it will enable access to the overall picture of the study population

- In connection with the tools of the study:

The study relied on the following tools

- 1- Survey office :
- 2- Conducting a number of interviews open
- 3- The application of two guides to the case study : one particular board members , volunteers and staff association Resalah Tookh branch and the other beneficiaries of the special services.

- The study sample :

Include the study sample (15 cases) of the members of the Board of Directors , staff and volunteers Association Resalah branch Tookh , and (30 cases) of the beneficiaries their services , which has been divided into three generations represented in the elderly (60 + years) , and the middle generation of (40-50 years) , and a generation of young people (18-25 years old) , male and female , where the percentage of males by 70% (21 cases) of the beneficiaries , the proportion of females , reaching 30% by (9 cases)

The study comes in the door and the prologue and epilogue , and represents the first section (institutional development and civil society) , where this section contains five chapters

Chapter 1: (concepts of the study) , which is the concept of development, institutional development , and sustainable human development , and the concept of civil society .

Chapter 2 : (previous studies)

Chapter 3: (theoretical foundations for the study of human development in civil society)

Chapter 4 : (Human Development " sociological vision ")

Chapter 5 : (role of civil society and human development)

The second section represents : (institutional development of civil society in a case study Resala Tookh charitable branch) , where this section contains three chapters

Chapter 1: (methodological procedures for the case study

Chapter 2 : (Association of Letter branch Tookh and Human Development " standards - mechanisms - obstacles ")

Chapter 3: (future vision to activate the mechanisms Association Resalah in human development) ;

The researcher found in this study to several findings and recommendations , was the most important :

The Human Development embrace the concepts of cooperation and partnership in the face of the issues and concerns of the community with the executive organs , popular and civil society institutions. By employing the resources available to improve and upgrade the education system in several ways ; facilitators include renovation of educational school , and make the learning process more engaging , and encourage community groups to take over the responsibility for good governance of the educational process .